Message

The National Council for Teacher Education has launched a “Self disclosure/Institutional” portal on its website www.ncte-india.org. The NCTE is dedicated to ensure that norms and standards in teacher education are continuously maintained by all institutions. The ‘self-disclosure’ would provide details of infrastructural and instructional facilities available in Teacher Education Institutions recognized by the NCTE, alongwith their recognition status, courses offered, intake capacity approved by the NCTE, its affiliation to university concerned, etc. This site would also identify the faculty members of the institution and would ensure that the institutions are more accountable to the people. Availability of this information in public domain would help bring more transparency as well as quality consciousness among the teacher education institutions.

This site has been developed with the technical support of the CDAC and various eminent experts. I wish this initiative a grand success.
